Note from Fr. Bill: Franciscan priest, Richard Rohr writes a daily reflection that I read and reflect on quite often. Throughout the month of May (2017) he focused on the writings of Paul the Apostle and offers insight for our reflection and action. The following is his summary of the Week of May 14-20, 2017. This reflection can be found on the website of The Center For Action and Contemplation. One aspect of the mission of this Center founded by Fr. Richard Rohr is captured in this quote:

The question for us is always “how can we turn information into transformation?”

How can we use the sacred texts, tradition, and experience to lead people into new places with God, with life, with themselves?

— Richard Rohr

“Theologian N. T. Wright concludes that we have largely missed Paul’s major theme, which is the new temple of God is the human person. (Sunday, May 14)

Paul brings a deep new sense of the inherent dignity of every human person. (Monday, May 15)

Paul is forever the critic of immature, self-serving religion, and the pioneer of mature and truly life-changing religion. (Tuesday, May 16)

The problem is not between body and spirit; it’s between part and whole. Every time Paul uses the word flesh, just replace it with the word ego, and you will be much closer to his point. (Wednesday, May 17)

After conversion, God is not “out there” you are in God and God is in you. (Thursday, May 18)

Believers exist as parts of the whole, the Body of Christ. Their very existence is the shared state that Paul calls “love” or living “in Christ.” (Friday, May 19)

Practice: Begin with Gratitude

Philippians is probably my favorite of Paul’s letters because it describes how we need to work with the rebellious, angry, and dualistic mind. Paul wrote his letter to the Philippians during one of his many imprisonments. He even mentioned being “in chains,” and yet ironically this is the most positive and joy-filled of all of his letters.

In a most succinct and perfect summary, Paul says that you should “Pray with gratitude, and the peace of God which is beyond all knowledge, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus” (Philippians 4:6-7). First, you must begin with the positive, with gratitude (which might take your whole prayer time). Second, you need to pray as long it takes you to find “peace,” to get to a place beyond agitation (whether five minutes or five hours or five days). Third, note that he says this is a place beyond “knowledge,” beyond processing information or ideas. Fourth, you must learn how to stand guard, which is what many call “creating the inner witness” or the witnessing presence that calmly watches your flow of thoughts (mind) and feelings (heart). Finally, you must know what the goal is: your egoic thoughts can actually be replaced with living inside the very mind of Christ (en Christo). This is not self-generated knowing, but knowing by participation—consciousness itself (con-scire, to know with).

Paul then goes on to suggest that we fill our minds “with everything that is true, everything that is noble, everything that is good, everything that we love and honor, everything that can be thought virtuous or worthy of praise” (Philippians 4:8). Norman Vincent Peale called this “the power of positive thinking.” I call it “replacement therapy.” If we don’t choose love and compassion, the human mind naturally goes in the other direction, and we risk joining a vast majority of people who live their later years trapped in a sense of victimhood, entitlement, and bitterness.” - Richard Rohr
